The WLCU Sydney Dr Charles Malik Award Rules

1. Introduction

- a) The WLCU Sydney Charles Malik Award is an annual competition open to all persons aged 15 years and over. The purpose of the competition is to promote exceptional literary merit within the Lebanese community and the diaspora.
- b) Entries will be sought for individuals or groups of individuals, to prepare an essay (hereafter referred to as “article”) on a topic of choice in accordance with the requirements outlined below in Section 3.
- c) The Competition is open to all Australians and non-Australians and will be a world-wide annual competition for all applicants.
- d) The Competition will officially open on 15th January each year with submissions to be received by 30th September each year.
- e) The Competition will be publicised using several formats, including social media platforms, electronic communications and via the WLCU Newsletter.
- f) The Award will be decided by the judging panel and formally presented at a special WLCU Sydney Dr Charles Malik Award Ceremony on 22nd November each year (coinciding with Lebanese Independence Day).

2. Panel of Judges

- a) There is to be a Panel of Judges with at least four (4) and a maximum of seven members.
- b) The Judges must be Members of the WLCU Sydney and shall be selected and appointed by the WLCU Sydney Committee. Judges will be appointed or re-appointed on an annual basis.
- c) The Judges are to act honourably at all times and to disclose any perceived bias or conflicts of interest with any of the applicants.
- d) The Panel of Judges must hold a formal meeting to officially decide upon the winners of the WLCU Sydney Dr Charles Malik Award. The award Recipients will be subsequently announced. The decisions of the Judging Panel will be final.

3. Articles Submitted

- a) The articles submitted for this competition are to be written in English, one-and-a-half-spaced, in Times New Roman size 12 font.
- b) The articles submitted are to be 3,000 words in length, and pages are to be numerated.
- c) The articles are to be judged both on the strength of their literary merit (use of English language) as well as the power, depth and choice of the topic in the dissertation. The use of profanities is therefore, severely discouraged, unless absolutely essential, in conveying the meaning of the essay.
- d) The articles must be both non-political and non-partisan. There is to be no personal indictment, racial or religious prejudice expressed in the articles. Vilification of countries or national identities is also prohibited.
- e) The subject of all articles submitted, must include a Lebanese theme. This however is unrestricted (for instance the topic may be of the Arts, economics etc.). This is designed to allow the author maximum creativity and scope, provided that the subject is not offensive. The intent is to express in words a form of literary celebration of Lebanese culture.
- f) The work produced is to be both authentic and original and must be the work of the author. It is expected that proper footnotes would be included if other work is referenced. Plagiarism is an immediate ground for disqualification.
- g) All articles submitted, will necessarily include the author's express permission, that the articles may be reproduced in future WLCU Sydney publications, communications or Newsletters. This will include appropriate acknowledgement of the author, who will be notified of the publication in advance.
- h) All entries are to be submitted as PDF or Word documents via the email or the official WLCU Sydney Website
